The 21st century city is inevitably global and local, dislodging boundaries between nation states and between public and private realms. This panel investigates such transformations of cities at the macro and micro scales. Transnational cross-currents between cities and within neighborhoods require cross-cultural understanding of urban spaces. The panel speakers will consider how transcultural processes can transform future cities engaging the potential of urban building forms ranging from micro-urban housing to new civic spaces.

Now Urbanism, a 2010-2011 Sawyer Seminar generously funded by the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and hosted by the Simpson Center for the Humanities, is a collaboration of the College of Built Environments and the College of Arts & Sciences, University of Washington, with support from the UW Alumni Foundation and the Graduate School. Now Urbanism is a central component of NEXT CITY, a two-year special initiative of the UW Office of the Provost that is focused on the challenges and opportunities of urbanization in the twenty-first century.
